We know that when our students thrive, our city thrives. My Dad always says, "the experiences and knowledge gained from your education are something that no one can take away from you." Education has always been a key value in our household, from my immigrant grandparents to my first-generation college father. I was afforded the financial and emotional support of my parents and family to focus on my education, something that has been transformative to the way I approach my personal and professional life. I want to be on the Denver Public Schools Foundation Board to provide this support to other kids in our community and eventually help narrow the education inequity gap. Having lived in five major cities around the US, I realize how important it is to focus on helping those in our backyard first and creating upward mobility opportunities, locally. I'm incredibly excited and honored to be considered for an organization that prides itself on the idea that every student should have an opportunity to access the highest quality of education.
